Of course, this means that the GMC Sierra and Yukon of the same years have the same issues. In fact, if you have a 4.8 L 5.3 L or 6.0 L in any General Motors vehicle, including a Hummer or Pontiac, you will probably run into a check engine light indicating a defective knock sensor at some point. The check engine light registering a code P0332 or ...

When a car doesn't start, many people wonder whether the alternator or the battery is to blame. Spoiler alert—when an engine either cranks sluggishly or doesn't crank at all, the issue is usually the battery. But that doesn't mean the alternator isn't occasionally to blame for the battery going dead in the first place.
